Missions

The need for high quality, impartational teaching in the developing nations of the world is ever present and heart-wrenching when one is touched by it first hand. I was once in a developing nation ministering to a group of leaders when I was told that in forty years of Protestant missionary endeavor in the country, they had never had instruction concerning the New Covenant. It was sobering when one considers the spiritual riches we often casually take for granted in the West.

It is common that the believers and churches in these parts of the world simply do not have the resources necessary to sponsor or host much needed classes and seminars, especially at a leadership level.

If you would like to support or contribute to the “missions” outreach of Wave of Life School, your donations would be greatly appreciated, and specifically honored (not used for general operating expenses).
